

Story from the editor:

This issue is clearly a Halloween extravaganza, complete with a Halloween story filled with suspense and enough plot to grow pumpkins.

The tale opens on an unsuspecting trick-or-treater, a Girl in a Dress, by Stephen Weiss. En route to a night of record candy, she is unwittingly victimized by two spooky ghosts, courtesy of Peter Budai. The first, a Clapping Ghost, starts clapping to distract her, while the other, Mr. Clawfinger, sneaks up from behind and snatches her bag of trick-or-treats filled with Shafer brand Chocolate Covered Ants. "Oh, somebody please help me!" she cries.

But, who suddenly comes out from the shadows of the night to save the day? Halloween's least likely hero, the $ Black Cat, by Stephen Weiss. What makes him black? Black paint -- a very clever disguise to fend off would-be burglars from stealing folded money!

The cat, who knows that these villains are really just trick-or-treaters in disguise, starts to chase them. But, just before the script becomes too predictable, Mr. Clawfinger catapults Jeremy's T-shirt Jack-O-Lantern at the cat! But the cat reverse engineers it with ease, tears it to shreds for its origami impurity, and continues chasing the ghosts! The girl, now in severe sugar withdrawal, joins the chase. Suddenly Jeremy's

In this Halloween issue...

Adventures in Japan, by Jeremy Shafer.....2-4
Girl in a dress, by Steven Weiss4-6
Clapping Ghost, by Peter Budai7
Mr. Clawfinger; the Ghost, by Peter Budai...8-10
$ Cat, by Stephen Weiss11-16
Chocolate Covered Ant, by Jeremy Shafer...7-18
Spider Web, by Jeremy Shafer.....9-20
 Back-issue Index21
T-shirt Jack O' Lantern.....back cover

Spider Web appears out of nowhere and catches the entire cast, as displayed on the cover of this BARF newsletter!

THE END

AFTERWARD:

The entire cast, caught in the web of BARF, was subjected to being folded over and over by BARF Members everywhere, and everyone folded happily ever after.

That means you too, but before jumping into the Halloween folding party, here is a real life origami adventure story by...

Yours truly,
 Jeremy